

Kevin Coyle is a 1983 graduate of Pinkerton High School in Derry. He graduated Magna Cum Laude from Keene State in 1987, and graduated in the top ten of his class from the Norman Adrian Wiggins School of Law in 1994. Kevin was admitted to practice law in the State of New Hampshire in October 1994, and has been a prosecutor since December 1994.

Kevin currently works for the Londonderry Police Department where he serves as prosecutor and legal advisor for the Department. During his career as a prosecutor, Kevin has tried hundreds of criminal cases against some of the best Lawyers in the State. He has also led a successful internship program which has help many other local police departments recruit career prosecutors. Kevin also serves as a Town Councilor in his home town of Derry where he has resided since 1972.

Kevin has been married to his wife Shannon for 12 years. They have two young children.